

Yes probably the guardian angel of myth but not usually involved in “saving” you, however, I do think they give you a nudge now and then, especially when an opportunity occurs for you to revisit your pathway through life.

REFLECTIONS FOR THE MONTH:

Thoughts on Spirit Guides

Clearly the concept of Spirit Guides is one that developed along with the philosophy of Spiritualism; through the discovery that we could communicate with those who were in Spirit. I don't think there is any attempt to claim that they were not there beforehand attempting to contact us, however communication with guides was probably misunderstood by people, like Joan of Arc's voices.

Indeed way back in history the Sumarians, whose civilization preceded Egypt, reaching the height of its powers around 3,000 BC, believed each person had a 'ghost' of some sort (that we would now probably label as 'guardian angel'), with this entity remaining a constant companion for a person throughout their life.

Now Spirit Guides have become well known to most seekers of spirituality indeed just about every pagan and alternative new age idea has included them into their reality. Unfortunately the multiplicity of versions leaves us with a need to attempt and explain the clear distinction of how they are seen in Spiritualism.

Over the years I have listened to a range of thoughts on this subject; from people with many years' experience within our movement. As a result I have arrived at my own interpretation, although I accept that others may wish to disagree.

Firstly are they Angels or Guides. Personally I see angels as on a different pathway and from a different path of evolution. I do not doubt they exist but believe there is a natural cause of confusion because we do, at times, see our Spirits as they really are, beings of light, not as they present themselves, clothed in their previous physical body

The confusion is worsened by the change of our Seven Principles where an original principle; Communion with Spirits as ministering Angels, has now become The Communion of Spirits and the Ministry of Angels. This change, away from Emma Hardinge Brittan's original, totally altered the meaning and led to the appearance of Angels as guides and the subsequent confusion.

Should we meet beings such as Angels and Archangels the biggest problem would be that their energy and vibrational levels would be so high that regular communication with us, as we have with our guides, would be virtually impossible. For Maurice Barbanell his guide acted as a power step down to bring the vibrations, from another more advanced guide, to a level where he could receive them to bring us the wisdom from Silver Birch.

I listened to an interesting discussion about the subject of Angels, where the hypothesis was put up that the angels were generally interested in global and planetary issues while guides helped on a personal basis. This appears to me to make much good sense and to correlate with the concept that guides are chosen from people who have lived a previous physical life, so that they are able to understand better the experiences that we are going through.

So guides as a concept, Spirit available to help you if asked but not tell you what to do or interfere with your free will. One who is around you whether or not you know of them. The key figure is your gatekeeper the guide who accompanies you through your physical journey.
